| 5. I cannot understate how important it is to most professionals to have a pleasant work environment. There are some engineers and scientists who would be happy in the unfinished attic above an old garage; however, most would prefer a quiet, modern office. I remember my first office in the US Army at Fort Bliss, Texas. It was in the back room of a converted WWII barracks. However, I had privacy, adequate lighting and ventilation, lots of space, and it was clean. I can say without reservation that none of these are features of my current "work area." I believe the situation is very serious, and one should not wait for years while a new building is completed. In private industry the employer would rent additional space before he would allow things to deteriorate to the point where them |

6. In summary, I would say that I believe that the Agency has for many years placed too high an emphasis on mission. Of course, our mission is very important, but we are not a military organization. I believe that Mr. Casey's "Search for Excellence" campaign may turn this problem around. It is people who accomplish the mission. I really believe that the people at CIA are unique and will give 110% toward the mission if someone will look out for them.

7. Once again, it has been my pleasure to serve. I hope I have many opportunities to serve the Agency and my Country in my new position.
